

Abstract

Previously there hasn't been much research in understanding the surface ordering and switching dynamics of LCs in planar geometry with no curvatures. We have found that LC order parameter starts to decrease at around 20nm from the surface which is consistent with the findings in similar experiments. In addition, electro-optic properties namely, the switching speed, was studied and were compared with the results of continuum model.